

FAKE DAD

Andrea de Varona (she/her) and Josh Ford (he/him) aka Fake Dad are a Los Angeles based, NYC bred indie rock meets dream pop duo. Formed in 2020, the two met at a college party in the East Village and have been inseparable ever since. Melting their own unique artistic visions to build a shared sonic shorthand, Fake Dad create an intoxicating and colorful musical fusion complete with catchy pop-laden hooks, crunchy, 90s inspired guitars, grooving bass lines, and buoyant synths. With a distinctive production sound and a signature vocal delivery, the two write and record expansive musical moments from their apartment. Although Andrea and Josh come from different musical backgrounds, they share a common goal: to create music that understands you.

With a unique musical perspective, and an unparalleled communal bond with their listeners, FD have already garnered much deserved attention, landing over a dozen official Spotify playlists and selling out shows in their hometown of NYC as well as their new home of Los Angeles. The duo's upcoming project, Holly Wholesome and The Slut Machine reveals a new era in their evolution as artists—preparing listeners for the expansiveness and singularity of what's to come in 2025 and beyond.

An intoxicating and colorful collection of songs...the two take a deep dive into interpersonal relationship dynamics in an ever-changing world.

"Through five incredibly diverse tracks, Fake Dad takes us all to school on quality alone...Yerba Mala plants firmly into fertile ground with its off-the-wall energy and versatile palette of sounds that should be every bedroom musician's wet dream"

"To [frontperson] de Varona's credit, she offers just as much self-aware, witty lyrics to rival James Murphy's signature deadpan delivery...In actuality, it's how Fake Dad combines all the elements into something concise in length, that makes them stand out in a sea of cheap imitators."
